Council asks for changes in terms of paper plant agreement

■ Council bounces paper plant agreement back to "tighten up" some language

By Steve Marschke

Last Wednesday, the West Sacramento City Council opted to send a proposed city/paper plant development back to city staff for a reworking of some "vague" language.

Councilman Wes Beers said that at a December workshop, he had asked the agreement to be modified to define terms like "economically feasible" and "best available technology." The agreement states that MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. of Vancouver, one of the partners in the venture, will use the best available technology, and technology that is economically feasible, to reduce the steam plumes coming from the Southport facility's smokestacks, and to pursue recycling or reuse of the plant's solid wastes.

But it said that these terms were to be decided by negotiation between the plant and the West Sacramento city manager, currently Joe Goeden.

"The agreement that came back (last week) tried to address those, but pretty much left them open to negotiation," said Beers.

The terms should be nailed down tighter, he said.

"I understand there is a federal procedure that determines 'best available technology,' and we should reference that," Beers commented.

He added that the plant will still have to work with the city to find a way to treat its sewage before it can begin operation.

"I believe it's real clear that they don't get a permit until all the conditions are met," he said.

Councilman Bill Kristoff commented Tuesday that the paper plant is badly needed by West Sacramento.

"Right now, the City of West Sacramento is really struggling for additional revenue," he said. "This is a billion dollar project -- this means a lot of money and jobs for the community. I want to make sure we bring this project in."

The issue will return Feb. 1.

Murder suspect turns himself in

Lee Wayne Davis, the suspect in the Jan. 9 stabbing death of Jeffrey Moore, 37, turned himself in on Friday, surrendering at a local bail bonds office.

Moore was stabbed to death while visiting a friend at an F St. trailer park. His identity was withheld last week pending the notification of his relatives.

Police Lt. Ron Moore said the attack may have followed a dispute between the two men over property possibly stolen by Davis from victim Moore. There was no altercation before the victim was stabbed from behind on Jan. 9, however.

EDAC commissioner Carron dies

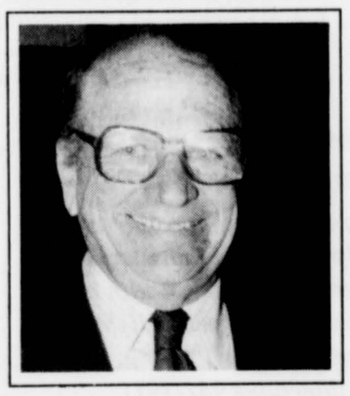
By Steve Marschke

Leo Eugene "Lee" Carron, a 77-year old member of West Sacramento's economic development advisory commission (EDAC), died of cancer on Saturday.

Carron, a retired industrial real estate broker, was appointed to EDAC by Cindy Tuttle shortly after her election to the city council in 1992. Tuttle is now the city's mayor.

She said that Carron was a "dear friend" of hers, and that she valued him both as a city leader and as a friend.

"Lee's knowledge and commitment to this community will be greatly missed," Tuttle said Tuesday. "He'd been battling cancer for several years now."



"Lee" Carron died Saturday at age 77. He was a member of the city's economic develoment advisory commission since 1992.

Carron was president of the Touchstone Lake Homeowners Association in Southport, West Sacramento. A Nebraska native, he dealt in industrial real estate in northern California since 1947, and was an active member of the Industrial Real Estate Brokers Group.fg

He was also a member of the Sacramento Golf Club and the El Macero Country Club.

Carron is survived by sons Gregg and Ross Carron of San Francisco, and by sisters Carmen Bonnie and Olive Bernst of Salinas. A memorial service is being planned, but details have not been set.

Reclamation district director:

Levees were never in any danger

How much did it rain last week, in the deluge that began on Monday, Jan. 9?

"We got nearly half of our annual average rainfall in four days," reported Ken Ruzich, director of Reclamation District 900, which is charged with keeping the southern portions of West Sacramento above water.

"My gauge picked up an inch of rain in 20 minutes," reported Ruzich, who battled local flooding during a 44-hour work shift that began Monday.

The rain continued with two inches over two hours and four inches in a 24-hour period.

"By Friday night, we had about eight inches," said Ruzich.

West Sacramento received nearly half of its annual rainfall last week

"Our total for the year is around 18 inches on average."

Because much of Northern California's rainfall was absorbed by still-low reservoirs, the Sacramento River never rose high enough to threaten local levees. The region only experienced local street flooding, power outages and other inconveniences because the city's drains and pumps couldn't always keep pace with the rain.

"We're still not close to the high river levels we had in 1986," he said, although the kind of deluge West Sacramento residents saw last week is regarded as a once-in-a-century event.

Local schools were closed for one day Wednesday, as it became difficult to travel on some streets in the region.

But now, said Ruzich, the jet stream seems to have shifted and to have put last week's tropical moisture back closer to where it belongs.

"We're back to normal -- colder weather and fog," he said.

New school sites discussed:

City council and school board to meet tonight

The city council of West Sacramento will meet with the school board of the Washington Unified School District tonight (Jan. 18) at 6 p.m. in the city council chambers, for a rare joint meeting before the city council's own meeting.

On the agenda will be future school sites and other development issues, as well as 1996 election dates.

Two cities, two stores, two styles:

Company officials say the proposed Southport 'Cheaper!' store will compare with the one in Woodland, above, and not the one on West Capitol Avenue, below.

■ City council will re-open debate on whether to allow "Cheaper!" discount grocery store at Linden Road's southern intersection with Jefferson Blvd.

By Steve Marschke

With much fanfare and many high hopes, the city of West Sacramento spent about a half-million dollars developing a master plan to ensure the high-quality development of Southport, its southern, 7,000-acre half.

The construction of a new "Cheaper!" discount grocery store may threaten some of those high hopes, feel some neighborhood activists in the region. The Southport Homeowners Association has appealed a planning commission decision to allow the store, and two city council members -- Greg Potnick and Wes Beers -- have also, independently, called the matter up for city council review.

That appeal is one of the items on the agenda of tonight's city council meeting, which starts at 7 p.m.

The Southport Homeowners Association has expressed concern over whether the combination gas station/8,000 square foot market will attract crime. But perhaps the main concern from the council's point of view is whether the store will increase -- or decrease -- the amount of auto traffic currently using the Jefferson Blvd. bridge over the barge canal.

No new development is currently allowed in Southport until after a second bridge is built, unless it can prove that it will lower the strain on the crowded bridge.

A study commissioned by the city showed that the proposed store would end up lessening the use of the bridge by about one percent. But not everybody accepts that report.

"There are some questions regarding the method used (to come up with those numbers)," said Mayor Cindy Tuttle. "I've asked that the

Hannigan bill deals with development

Assemblyman Tom Hannigan (D-Solano/Yolo) has introduced an assembly bill which would prohibit cities and counties from approving a development project until they determine how the project's basic infrastructure needs (roads, schools, water and sewer facilities) are financed.

"AB 96 insures that all local governments and homeowners know who will be paying the bill for public facilities," Hannigan was quoted in a press release from his office. "The business of build now and find a mechanism to pay later is preposterous. We must take a more common sense approach toward development."

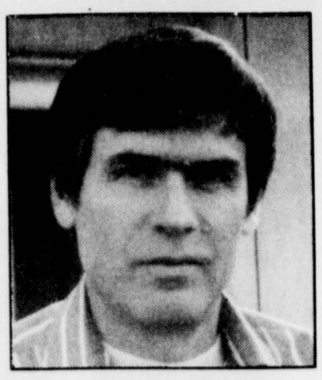
Determining who will foot the bill for infrastructure costs before development happens is a "fundamental concept of planning," Hannigan added.

The concept is a "common sense thing any local government should be doing," responded Wes Beers, a West Sacramento city councilman.

"I'm just surprised, given that the state has been very active in taking money away from cities and counties for state government, that they would do this."

Family flood crisis: power outage means no TV

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Monday before last, about three o'clock in the afternoon, the electrical power in our house suddenly went out. The high winds which had caused the power failure were quickly followed by a steady downpour of monsoon-like rain and just after dark, with nothing but a few flickering candles and an old flashlight to show the way, my family and I began gathering in our cozy little living room to wait out the storm.

"This is really something," I said as I looked out my patio door and watched my backyard fill up with water. "I've never seen it rain like this in West Sacramento before. It's coming down in buckets. I bet there's going to be streets flooded everywhere."

"I barely made it home from work," said my oldest son, Ty. "The water on the roads was over my tires in some places.

"Just what will happen if these storms don't stop and one of those levies up on the River Road breaks?" asked my middle son, Paul.

"You don't want to know," I assured him.

"Would it really be that bad?" asked my wife.

I nodded my head and said, "Every house around here would probably end up about ten feet under water."

"Is our flood insurance paid up?" Paul asked his mother with concern.

"I wonder what people did before they had electricity?" asked Ty as he continued drawing circles on the ceiling with the beam of light from his flashlight.

"They must have been bored out of their minds--just like I am right now," answered my daughter, Carrie, who was slumped down at the end of the couch.

"Well," I said, trying to change the mood in the room, "it looks like we're going to be sitting around here in the dark for quite awhile--does anyone know any good ghost stories?" "This isn't funny, Dad," said my daughter. "I had my whole evening planned out--and now I can't do anything. How long do you think it will be before everything is back on?"

"God's not an electrician," volunteered Ty, just to irritate his sister.

"I know," suggested my wife, trying to make the best of things, "why don't we make it a family night? It's not often that we're all in one room for any length of time." Her words were immediately greeted with a loud chorus of moans and groans from my three oldest kids, but she ignored them and said, "How about if we play twenty questions or something?"

"Can I go first?" eagerly asked my youngest son, Kyle.

"Sure," said Mary.

"Okay," said Kyle with a serious expression on his candlelit face, pointing to our grandfather clock. "Why do they call those things grandfather clocks anyway? Why don't they just call them tall clocks?"

"Good question, Kyle," I said with a smile, "you got me."

"Mother!" said Carrie, obviously annoyed with the conversation, "do we really have to sit around here and play some stupid game?"

"The lights will be back on soon," I assured my daughter.

"Well, I sure hope so," she said. "I'm going to miss Melrose Place--and then I'm going to have to go around tomorrow asking everyone at work what happened."

"Well," said Ty with a smile, "now there's a big problem if I ever heard one."

"I can't even answer my phone messages," added Carrie.

"All I know," interjected Paul, rubbing his eyes with both hands, "is that I'm getting a headache from all these stupid flickering candles."

"And they smell awful, too," added Ty, wrinkling up his nose.

"Just listen to you guys," I said. "You know, it really wasn't all that long ago that people everywhere lived just like this every single night--no television--no radio--no phone messages--nothing. All they had for entertainment was each other."

"Oh, no," said Ty, covering his ears, "here he goes!"

"They didn't have things like microwave ovens, either," I continued. "If they wanted to do something as simple as fix a meal, they had to start a fire and make all the food from scratch. And if they wanted to take a bath before they went to sleep, someone had to actually go out to a well, carry buckets and buckets full of water back into the house and heat it all up."

Then, just when I was about to really get into what I believe those long forgotten days can teach us all, the electricity suddenly returned and every single light, television set, and radio in the whole house went back on.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Carrie as she leaped up from the coach and raced off towards her phone messages.

"Hold that thought, Dad," said Ty as he flipped me the flashlight and hurried back to his electric guitar.

"Well," I said to my wife as our two other sons quickly disappeared into their bedroom and began firing up their video games, "so much for a family night."

The 49ers are going to the SUPER BOWL!! The 49er fans started chanting "Steve. . . Steve. . . Steve... throughout Candlestick Park as the clock ticked down on the Dallas Cowboys. The Niners finally beat the Boys 38-28 to earn their first trip to the Super Bowl in five years. Young, who has been playing in the shadow of Joe Montana, finally got the monkey off his back -- or was it a gorilla!

Steve Young is one game away from his perfect season that includes leading the NFL in passing with some dazzling numbers: 112.8 rating; 70.3 percent accuracy; 35 TDs, 3,969 yards and the league's Most Valuable Player award.

Remember how upset fans were two years ago when the 49ers traded Joe Montana for a first round pick? That first round pick turned out to be All-Pro defensive tackle Dana Stubblefield. The 49ers buried the Cowboys early, scoring 21 points in the first five minutes after three Dallas turnovers. The Cowboys played well, but you can't spot the 49ers 21 points and expect to win.

The 49ers now have the opportunity to become the first team in NFL history to win FIVE Super Bowl rings (one for the thumb). Getting their new rings will require winning one more game on January 29th in Miami against the San Diego Chargers.

The Chargers shocked the football world and the Steelers with a 17-13 upset in Pittsburgh. The Chargers were 10-point underdogs and had never won an AFC championship game. The Steelers started the game scoring on their first drive and it looked like the Chargers were going to get their lunch handed to them. But All Pro linebacker Junior Seau played the game of his life.

Seau made 16 unassisted tackles and the Chargers' defense held the NFL's No. 1 rushing attack to just 66 yards in 26 carries. The Chargers used two long passes to score touchdowns, and the defense held on in the last quarter to win the game on fourth down at the Steelers goal line.

The early line on Super Bowl XXIX has the 49ers as 18-point favorites! The 49ers beat the Chargers by 23 points on Dec. 11 in San Diego, 38-15.

The Sacramento Kings (19-15) returned from a road trip winning two out of four games, but in one of the losses, the Kings were leading by one point in the final seconds in Boston when Dee Brown scored two points at the buzzer. Did you know the Kings have a better record than the Bulls (18-18)!!

Look for the Kings to activate Frank Brickowski this week as they host Portland on Tuesday and the Warriors on Thursday. See ya next week!!

Wise move to try again on paper plant agreement

It was good to see the West Sacramento City Council send the paper plant development agreement back for a much needed rewrite.

The agreement was too loose and unenforceable. This problem will not totally be cured in a new agreement (such development agreements tend to protect the developers' interests more than the public's), but it can be helped.

A number of people continue to look at the project through rose-colored glasses, and that's what gets West Sacramento into trouble. How many times has West Sacramento been fed promises which were not kept, on this or other projects?

When Measure B (which determined, by a one-percent margin, the fate of the Southport Industrial Park) was being debated, a number of promises and "facts" were thrown about. Among them was a promise that the developers would immediately build a bridge if Measure B was defeated. Where's the bridge?

Another was that the city would be $2,916,591 (or some such number) better off every year if the measure was defeated. Where's the money? We're talking about close to 15 million dollars since 1990, according to the industrial proponents. That sure would be a nice bonus to the city coffers.

Now, we are wise not to allow a company to protect our interests when "economically feasible" and when the company happens to agree with the city manager that cleaner, better, economical technology is practical.

And that's why the agreement is headed back for a re-write.

Speaking of rose-colored glasses:

One of the chief benefits of the plant will be the taxes it pays. The fact that it is a billion dollar project is often cited. But this does not mean a billion dollars in construction; what is frequently overlooked is that about 80 percent of this sum will be spent on two paper-making machines to be imported from Europe.

Just how much will the company end up paying annually for property taxes, or for sales taxes? Despite a rosy early estimate swallowed by some city staff members, no one really knows (or if they know, they aren't saying).

According to the Yolo County tax assessor, there are a lot of variables involved in calculating the taxes, and a lot of negotiation as depreciation tables are figured. But one thing's for sure -- the new plant will not be paying taxes on a billion dollars in property value every year.

When the dust settles, and we have paid for the new rail lines, the new industrial roads and the bridges, West Sacramento may be financially better off because of the plant. But the recycling facility certainly won't prove to be some kind of goose with the golden egg. If there's one thing we should have learned, it is that there really is no such animal.

'Cheaper' store owner makes his case to neighbors of project

Copies of the following letter, along with a videotape, were distributed to Southport residents living near the proposed new Cheaper! store site recently:

From John Roscoe
The Customer Company

To the residents of Southport:

We own and operate Cheaper stores. We want to build a store at the corner of Jefferson Boulevard and Linden Road in Southport. We purchased the land last spring and have asked the city for approval to build an 8,000 square foot discount grocery store.

The project was approved by the West Sacramento Planning Commission on November 17, but an appeal to that approval was made on December 2, 1994. The city council meeting will be held on January 18 at City Hall.

I would like to invite you to visit any of the 92 stores we operate. I'd particularly like you to visit our newer stores. Though the stores listed below and shown in the video are only 6,000 square feet in size and we are proposing an 8,000 square foot store on 3 acres of parking and landscaped area (about 120,000 square feet of land) in Southport, they are representative of the new stores we are building and operating.

1. Our newest store is at 901 East Street in Woodland. Though the gasoline system and landscaping will not be finished until next week, the store is open. It is very attractive. The store has many innovations. It replaces an older store we operated on the site for about 20 years.

2. In September we opened a store at Benicia Road and Laurel in Vallejo. It is adjacent to Highway 80. From Westbound Interstate 80 take the Georgia Street exit, take the overpass over the freeway, and take the first right, Steffan Street, following it for 1/2 mile (it will turn into Laurel Street); the store will be on the right.

3. Our store at Gold Hill Road in Cordelia. This store is just off Highway 680. Take the Gold Hill off ramp. The store was the first of this model and has been open 3 years. It is representative of the way we operate and maintain our stores.

4. Our store at Highways 29 and 53 in Lower Lake. The store was opened about a year ago. It replaced an older and smaller store we operated across the street. It serves as the basic source of food supply for the residents of Lower Lake.

5. Our store at Highway 4 and Balfour Road south of Brentwood. It is located on Highway 4, across from new houses. It was one of the earlier stores of this model. The store has been so popular we recently purchased the land next door to enlarge the parking lot. The new neighborhood is similar to that of Southport.

We operate discount grocery stores. We price our products below supermarket prices. Our same store sales continue to grow. Customers like our stores. We are good neighbors.

We name the store after the manager. All of the stores are company operated, but we've found they do better and look better if the manager's name precedes ours on the marquee. I've owned stores for 37 years and have operated in California since 1964. My wife, son and daughter are active seven days a week in the business. We own almost all of our real estate, so we care about the property and the neighborhood. We've been successful by continuing to improve our stores and continuing to improve our customer service.

We also have a small store on West Capitol Avenue in West Sacramento. We operate here under constrained circumstances. On a sales per square foot basis it has one of the highest figures in the country. We operate this store very successfully. Our sales are up 22% since we did some remodeling in May of 1994.

My phone number is 1-800-CHEAPER, extension 251. My office is at 4457 Park Road in Benicia. It's just off Highway 680. You may drop in anytime and talk to either me, Ned Roscoe, or Sally Baldwin. You don't need an appointment.

I'd like your support for our new store. We are building great looking facilities. We run them well. We maintain our premises. We act responsibly. We are a family company and plan to be around for a long time.

Miss Alice Harms is confined to her home with a case of influenza. Yesterday she was feeling somewhat relieved and expects to be out in a few days.

In a letter from Rudolph Binse to J. N. Bennetts he explains that he has been on furlough in Paris during ten days prior to the writing of the letter and while thoroughly enjoying the experience and the new sights of a great capital, he is tired of foreign service and wishes to get home. Binse is feeling well, is big and stout, and evidently putting in some time in studying the conditions in European countries.

Leo Brash, who has been at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank De Riso, during the past two months, left here Wednesday to take a position in Oakland.

George Lynch, down with the influenza during the past two months and still suffering from the effects of pneumonia, was reported to be improved somewhat yesterday.

Word has been received by Mrs. E. Peek from her son Leland, who is in a base hospital in France, advising that he is getting along nicely and improving, although he has not specified what has happened to him at the Front. He explains that he wrote five letters home but none have been received since November 5th, while parents and friends in Washington have written him nine letters which have evidently not reached him. Mrs. Peek feels satisfied that at least he is able to write and that he can see, although she is not aware of the extent of his injuries.

Mrs. H. M. Eugene left here last Wednesday for New Work on receipt of advice from physicians at Camp Mills. Her son, Percy, following a severe case of influenza a few months ago, is seriously ill, so serious that he has developed a case of pulmonary tuberculosis. The physician advising his condition recommended that she make the trip as soon as possible. Mr. Eugene did not go this time because he has been laboring under a severe cold.

Eddie Moss, one of the popular proprietors of the Washington Meat Market, has been confined to his home during the past few days. It is not a case of influenza, because yesterday he felt greatly improved and was around town for a few hours. During his absence P. M. Packard is doing the honors at the butcher shop.

J. G. Soule has been unable to attend to his business during the past few days. His is not a case of influenza but he is resting easily.

Mrs. Wm. Woods was taken down at her home last Wednesday afternoon. Her daughter, Mrs. Brady, of Davis, is attending her during her illness.

Mrs. Bessie Flint, a niece of W. D. Smith, died in Sacramento last Sunday, the result of pneumonia, following a case of influenza. She was a native of Williams, Colusa County, and leaves a young boy only four years of age. She was sick but three days.

Kathleen Brietzke, who was seriously ill during all of last wek with bronchial pneumonia, was able to be around yesterday, almost completely recovered.

M. Spurgeon was badly injured yesterday afternoon coming down the river when the middle finger of his right hand became jammed in the gasoline engine and the tip was taken off clean. He had his injuries attended to at the Emergency Hospital in Sacramento.

A Cadillac automobile, 8 cylinder, fully equipped, in fairly good condition, was found last Wednesday by Percy Hart and August Brietzke in the dredger cut outside of the Natomas levee near the mouth of the American river. The car was pulled out of the cut and towed to the Sheriff's office in Sacramento where it was found that a standing reward of $100 had been offered for its recovery. The car had been in the dredger cut for several weeks but was not badly damaged. It was owned by a party in Marysville from whom it had been stolen and who offered the reward. Hart used a caterpillar to pull the auto out of the cut and on towing it to the Sheriff's office received half of the reward for his trouble. The other half was paid to the party reporting the car. The machine had been repainted since it was stolen and the license plates had been removed. It was evidently the intention of the party who drove the car into the dredger cut to sink it in the river, and must have driven it deliberately over the edge of the levee, believing the momentum would take it into deep water.

Mrs. Mary Noyes is confined to her home with influenza but is recovering rapidly.

A. L. Chase has been called to Challenge, Yuba County, by the illness of his father and some other members of his family who are down with influenza.

James Lear is again able to attend to his duties in the Pacific Gas & Electric Company's car barn at 28th and N streets. In mistake, a few days ago, he swallowed a quantity of alum which caused his illness.

Fred White, Jr., spent last Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. White. He was on his way from Camp Dix, N. J., to San Francisco where he expects an early discharge from the Army.

The City of Sacramento has a municipal dentist and a municipal physician and a municipal optometrist, and pretty soon there is going to be a municipal horse doctor and a municipal baker and a municipal cobbler and a municipal bank.

But the worst of all is that now proposed by one of the legislators at the Capitol.

He wants a pension for broken down lawyers.

HUNDREDS OF MEN ARE EMPLOYED IN INDUSTRIES OF YOLO COUNTY

Following an article published in The Independent of last week, many inquiries were received at the office of the paper concerning the number of men employed in the various plants at this side of the river.

Desiring to inform its readers fully on this matter, a trip of inspection was made the other day from one plant to another and the following information gleaned:

At the Sacramento Valley Dock and Warehouse there are at present seventy men at work. Two shifts are operating with the probability that another shift consisting of about thirty men will be added in the near future.

All these men are paid not less than 40 cents an hour, and many receive wages varying between 50 cents and 75 cents per hour.

Nearly all these men are skilled in the work which they do, except the laborers and truckers who handle beans on the floor of the mill and big warehouse.

At the California State Rice Milling Company plant a total of ninety men are now at work. Not less than 50 cents per hour is paid to any of these men and there are several mechanics receiving wages as high as $7 and $8 per day.

All the rice now being milled by the California State Rice Milling plant is being done under Government supervision, a margin being allowed the owners of the concern to repay them in part interest for their investment.

The buying of rice is now being done by the Rice Association and as it arrives from the warehouses is apportioned by the Government to the different plants for milling and cleaning purposes.

At other times the milling companies go into the fields to buy the product of the farmers, handling it as do the flour mills of the State and shipping it to the points where the best market prevails.

Six thousand bags of rice have been handled daily by the California State Rice Milling Company.

Mr. Garvey, manager and superintendent of this mill, advised The Independent that he is always anxious to secure men from the neighborhood of the mill as help on the working force.

At the National Rice Mills, fifty men are now at work. Every day there are three shifts at work so that the mill is busy during every twenty-four hours.

Mr. Morse, superintendent of the plant, advised The Independent that he is also anxious to secure home talent for help, giving the preference to men who can be near their work and ready at call if an emergency should happen.

It will be seen from the above that there are now employed in these three plants just mentioned 210 men, all receiving good wages and all making their residence in Washington, insofar as they can find vacant houses.

Merchants of Sacramento consider the community for there being but few stores in Washington, those workingmen and their families do all their trading in Sacramento.

In addition to the above, there is the box factory now being built and on which thirty mechanics are engaged.

There is also the Horst Dehydrating plant in which only a few hands are engaged at the present writing but which will probably employ in the near future not less than 100 people.

The Sorrento Canning Company has a force of 15 people busy at the present time.

All these latter people are contributary to Sacramento because of the absence of stores in Washington.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL WILL OPEN FEBRUARY 3

Owing to the epidemic of influenza the trustees of the Washington Public School have decided that the session will not open until February 3d.

From the County Superintendent of Schools a reduced course has been received, permitting the children to finish the year's study as usual but endeavoring to make up what may be lost during the coming year.

In this reduced course, word analysis, sewing and manual training have been dropped thus giving the children opportunity to keep up their other studies to the maximum.

The trustees believe that the children can safely drop those studies and continue their course without wasting a year to make up what was lost during the epidemic of influenza.

SEEDS FOR DISTRIBUTION

The Independent is in receipt of several packages of flower and garden seeds from the National Government sent here through the courtesy of Congressman C. F. Curry.

For the convenience of readers of The Independent part of the seeds are at the Post Office in Washington and part in the office of the paper in the Peoples Bank in Sacramento.

There is no charge for distribution or otherwise. They are free as long as they last. Call and get a package.

WHITE AT HOME IN RIVERBANK HONORABLY DISCHARGED

Last Sunday afternoon, E. C. White returned after an absence of six months with an honorable discharge from the Army of the United States.

During his absence he was a member of the 87th Engineering Corps and filled the position of Sergeant at the time of his discharge.

About November 1st he with his company left New York for service in France but when at sea five days from port a wireless advised the commander of the ship that an armistice had been signed and that the return trip should be made immediately without landing at a French port.

White says that his company was extremely disgusted by this kind of news, because they had been especially trained to man the big gun which was to respond to the great cannon which the Germans had been using to bomb Paris.

He has applied for his old position with the S. P. Co. and was welcomed back by his old foreman when he made his appearance at the shops.

Ed White was a grandfather when he volunteered. Although only 41 years of age he has already raised a family and was willing to serve his country without waiting for the draft. He is a Spanish War Veteran and has now come home with an honorable discharge from the big fight of the century.

The extraordinary loyalty that prompted this grandfather to volunteer his services for Uncle Sam is only an example of the almost universal feeling that pervaded this section of Yolo County during the call to arms.

WOOL GROWERS WILL MEET ON JANUARY 22D AT DAVIS

The California Wool Growers' Association will hold its annual meeting at the University Farm, Davis, January 22 and 23. Professor Gordon H. True has notified President Fred Ellenwood of Red Bluff that these dates will be satisfactory.

Ellenwood will attend the National Wool Growers' Association convention in Denver and return with reports from that gathering for the members of the State Association.

It will be necessary to elect a new secretary to replace Professor Robert F. Miller, who recently joined the staff of the Texas Agricultural Collegt.

The Board of Supervisors of Tehama County placed a ban on public dancing the other day until every trace of the influenza epidemic has disappeared.

A wise board, but there is danger that the inhibition may never be lifted.

Police log

Jan. 12, 2:30 p.m.

A 52-year old Citrus Heights man was arrested for sexually molesting a nine year old West Sacramento girl over a several month period. He confessed to the charges.

Jan. 12, 5:15 p.m.

Officers arrived at a B St. home to serve a warrant on a 21-year old man. They saw him run from the house, and while subduing him, the suspect kicked and injured an officer in the leg. He was subdued with the help of a baton, and was medically cleared before being booked.

How To Save $60 On A $15 Toy

Your youngsters could be playing with hidden costs: the price of the batteries used to run their toys. Fortunately, many families have found, reusable alkaline batteries can make a big difference.

(NAPS)—The next time you buy a battery-run toy, consider this: over time, you may pay more for the batteries than for the toy.

This fact has motivated many families to look into renewals. Unlike old rechargeables, renewal batteries are alkaline, so you get more life—more playtime—from each charge. The new Rayovac Renewal® Reusable Alkaline Batteries™ are the only alkaline batteries created to be reused over and over again. What's more, their Renewal Power Station makes charging them seem like child's play.

With all the money you save on batteries, you could buy those youngsters even more toys. You could even buy a few for yourself.

To learn more about it, call 1-800-237-7000.

traffic engineer be present so we can really get some of these issues addressed."

Tuttle said that crime issues surrounding the store have been "well handled by city staff." The store cannot, for example, operate around the clock. It must close at night.

Company officials have circulated copies of a letter and a video to Southport residents, inviting them to contact the company with their concerns.

They have emphasized that the new store will not compare with older "Cheaper!" stores, but with several new "Super Cheaper!" stores, including sites in Woodland, Vallejo, Cordelia, Lower Lake and Brentwood.

"Customers like our stores," wrote John Roscoe, owner of the stores' parent company, The Customer Company. "We are building great looking facilities. We run them well. We maintain our premises. We act responsibly."

Roscoe stated that the "Cheaper!" store now operating in West Sacramento on Poplar Ave. and West Capitol is operating under "constrained circumstances," but that "sales are up since we did some remodeling."

Elsewhere, the company has a reputation for frustrating local government. In Dixon, some officials are angry that the local "Cheaper!" store erected a giant dinosaur as a tourist attraction, and that the company is disposing of its own garbage (instead of using the municipal garbage contractor), which the city says is costing the city money.

Opening lead — eight of spades.

Of the three departments of bridge — bidding, dummy play and defense — by far the most difficult is defense. When you're a defender, you see only half of declarer's resources (the 13 cards in dummy) and only half of your side's resources (the 13 cards you were dealt).

This contrasts greatly with the position of the declarer, who has the advantage of seeing all 26 cards held by his side. He knows exactly which high cards and how many cards of each suit are missing, and can therefore formulate a plan as to how best to deal with them.

Consider this case where West leads the eight of spades in response to his partner's spade overcall. East wins with the king and returns the seven of spades, won by declarer with the queen. South leads the jack of hearts and it does not matter which defender wins the trick.

If West takes the jack with the king, he does not have a spade to return. And if East takes the jack with the ace, he can return a spade and establish his suit, but has no entry card to cash his spades. So declarer makes four notrump, losing only a spade and two hearts.

With better defense, however, South goes down one. Had East played the seven of spades at trick one instead of the king, declarer could not have made the contract, regardless of what he did next.

West would win South's first heart lead and return a spade, establishing East's spades. Sooner or later, the defenders would score three spade tricks and the A-K of hearts to put South down one.
